- Peer Feedback Skills

Outdoor Management Development or OMD has long been used as a way to facilitate accelerated change and develop effective leadership and teamworking skills. Using the power of the great outdoors, we will put together a programme based on your individual needs that will stretch and develop your team's leadership and interpersonal skills. This is a powerful and effective way to facilitate fast and long-lasting change. Real experiences, real consequences and real meaning: all transferable and very applicable to the business environment.

Why does it work so well? We operate a policy of 'Challenge by Choice'. This means that through consultation with you, we will provide a series of challenges to stretch and strengthen your team and it's members. You are always in control of your level of participation and how you contribute to the team's goal. Rather than avoid issues and challenges, we find that fully adopting this inspiring approach leads to team members being empowered to take on responsibility and new challenges and to have honest and open conversations about what they feel they can and cannot do.

Testimonials

Museum of London

"Thanks for the training day last Friday - everyone thoroughly enjoyed themselves. As per the last time, I was impressed with the venue and your personal/professional training standards."

"Just to let you know that I have spoken to the team today and they are universal in their praise of the course and the way you ran it - they think it will have a profound impact on issues of trust, support and team bonding... the team are buzzing at the moment so well done."

Who is it for?

- Any level of team wanting to develop high performance
